HISTORIC BREVARD

A stone arrow or spear point discovered in association with mastodon remains near Melbourne by a Harvard University zoologist in 1929 shook the previously held belief within the archaeology community that people were not living in this area long enough ago to hunt the Pleistocene mega fauna. The discovery of another man-made stone implement at the same site was announced almost simultaneously by a Smithsonian Institution scientist. It has since been confirmed that ancient people inhabited Florida as much as 13 thousand years ago and probably more.
